

Careers

The political science degree from Clarion University will prepare you for continued studies in graduate school for careers in law and education.

Graduates are also in high demand for careers in:

- state, local, and federal government
- journalism
- working with private interest groups
- associations
- international organizations
- political campaign management

Large corporations consider political science a good foundation for specialized training and there is an increasing demand for skilled professionals in the fields of international business, banking, and overseas agencies. International employment opportunities for political sciences graduates are growing.