

MINOR IN LEADERSHIP

Design a program to fit your specific needs.

We focus on core subjects in sociology, ethics, management, communications, and political science. Students design a program meeting their specific needs by selecting one of the areas of emphasis below:

Individuals as Leaders
(individual-level analysis of leadership)

Team and Group Leadership
(group-level analysis of leadership)

Organizational Leadership
(organizational-level analysis-integrative leadership)

You will understand the role of the individual, group, and organization in a variety of leadership settings by applying the concepts you have learned.

And we encourage you to think creatively and to explore the ethical, social, behavioral, and political dimensions of leadership.

You will have a deeper understanding of leadership in today's society as well as a thorough recognition and readiness to apply leadership to your chosen career.

Leadership minor

LEADERSHIP... and THEN some

This track in leadership at Clarion University is an interdisciplinary program housed within the College of Business Administration and is open to all students regardless of their major.

You will experience critical leadership principles through theory, application, and skill development. As a result, our program gives you exposure to a body of knowledge emphasizing both leadership concepts and the development of leadership skills.

Through co-curricular and community service-learning activities, you will develop and enhance specific leadership skills that can extend to your academic areas of interest.

By selecting a faculty mentor from your major, you have help with program design, establishing overall objectives, and monitoring progress.

“At a larger school, I never would have been exposed to so many leadership opportunities in my freshman year.”
