

ECON 224 United Nations

Taught by Dr. Sandra Trejos
Winter 2020 Session

Introduces students to the history, structure and function of the United Nations, particularly related to economic issues. Specific emphasis given to Sustainable Development Goals, and the role of the UN in assisting member nations to achieve these goals. The class integrates policy and theory, as students will have the opportunity to join the Model United Nations student organization, and attend the National Model United Nations conference in the Spring in New York City. If students attend the conference, it becomes part of the course workload. Students who do not attend complete alternative assignments.
