

Careers

Wherever people interact with one another, sociological knowledge and expertise is helpful. In this sense, career possibilities are practically unlimited, ranging from academic research to business practice.

Our department emphasizes not only the content and substance of sociology, but also the very process of learning. These skills will enable graduates to manage information effectively in any career they select.

Some examples of where you will find our graduate majors today:

Advertising	Labor Relations
Business and Marketing	Personnel Management
Communications	Social Research
Counseling	Social Work
Government	State and Local Government
School Teaching	Law Enforcement
Social Services	University Teaching and Research
Law

Sociology also teaches skills that are beneficial and related to further studies in the following areas:

Criminology	Law
Business	Social Work
Education	Sociology